THIS SURVEY OF THE

GREAT POST ROADS

BETWEEN LONDON AND EDINBURGH

IS MOST RESPECTFULLY

INSCRIBED BY

HIS MUCH OBLIGED

HUMBLE SERVANT

M. J. ARMSTRONG

To the P U B L I C.

THE singular utility of a correct TRAVELLING DIRECTORY must be obvious even to the meanest capacity; an apology is therefore totally unnecessary. The Author, however, is compelled to make this just, though trite observation, that notwithstanding the uncommon demand for similar productions, public liberality, as in most other instances, has been too frequently prostituted to mercenary purposes.

In May 1773, proposals were offered for publishing a SURVEY of the POST ROADS from London, by Carlisle and Newcastle, to Edinburgh, in One Volume, at 10s. 6d. to which the Author acknowledges to have received a numerous and respectable list of subscribers: But to have included these two great roads, with their several branches in One Volume, would have increased it to a size by far too large for the pocket, and required a more general sale than could be supposed to indemnify the expences of the publication.

This VOLUME, comprehending the Post-roads from London, by Wetherby and York, to Newcastle; and from Newcastle, by Berwick, Coldstream and Kelso, to Edinburgh, is humbly presented to the Public, not only as a work complete in itself, but likewise as a specimen of such future Surveys on the same plan as he means to undertake so soon as the public opinion is ascertained with regard to this.

It was the Author's intention to have given such historical extracts, and traditional information as would have, in some measure, elucidated the History, Antiquities, Constitution, Produce and Commerce of the country within the limits of the survey; but this he found, would have retarded the publication for such a length of time, as might have incurred the displeasure of those who had contributed so liberally to its encouragement. By this omission, however, it is presumed he has not lessened in any degree, the merit or utility of the publication; but, upon the whole, has so improved on the original design, as to render it the most accurate and comprehensive of the kind extant.

To be silent as to the authorities from which this TRAVELLING COMPANION is compiled would, by some, be deemed an unpardonable omission; the Publisher therefore informs the purchaser, that 300 miles of the road were taken from Surveys made by Capt. ARMSTRONG and himself; and that the remainder was laid down from his own observations, adopting such actual surveys as he could assuredly confide in. The scale to which the whole is reduced, is HALF an INCH to a STATUTE MILE, and the extent of each page TWELVE MILE by SIX.

The Plan, and Manner of distinguishing the different objects described in the Survey, are so very obvious, that little explanation is required: the Publisher will only observe, that the most assiduous application and minute attention have not been wanting to complete this very laborious and expensive undertaking.

In order to obviate, as much as possible, the long-complained-of difficulty of finding the real distance between each post-stage, the following Tables are subjoined; which are intended not only as a comparative view of the uncertain and incorrect distance charged on some stages, but as insertions of the utmost service to Travellers, whether riding Post, in a Chaise, or in a Stage Coach.
